That might have been just legal manoeuvring, but the question will eventually arise: who gets to decide what appears on the Metaverse? Given Roblox's significant audience of under-13s, the company is understandably keen on safety, employing over 3,000 people around the world to screen for inappropriate content. That is good news if you're a parent, but bad if you're a creator in a hypothetical future where a moderated Metaverse becomes the primary conduit for entertainment consumption and your work is judged sufficiently inappropriate.

It's because people look for non-legal avenues to obtain free Robux that their accounts are compromised, their computers loaded with malware, or their personal information is accessed. But why would you?” he says, matter-of-factly. “In pandemic times, it's easy to say that: ‘You can go online and watch movies with your mates!’ But why would I need to go online, when I can just watch it on my television, which is much bigger – and doesn't have little [avatars] anywhere?”

And while more than 50 percent of Roblox players are under the age of 13, it's not just kids playing it; 30 percent of players are older than 17. Roblox told me that ages 13–17 and 17–24 are its fastest-growing demographics.

A good year or so I wrote an article called 'What is Roblox?'. At the time I was new to the game that my young son had started playing and thought it a good idea to educate people on what the 'game' actually was. After playing with my son for over a year on Roblox I felt it was time to rewrite the article as there is plenty that the original didn't cover.
